Let's face it, the US left is a long way right now from contending for power. One of many useful questions asked at last week's Left Forum in NYC invited some of us to speculate on what an authentic 21st century US left might look like. Here's what I came up with. 1. An authentic left must be independent of Republicans and Democrats.

"Black Like Me" follows author John Howard Griffin, a Texas-born journalist, as he explores the very face of racism and prejudice in the Deep South in 1960s...in blackface. Far from a punchline, it's the ethnographic method Griffin uses to infiltrate black neighborhoods that would be otherwise socially locked to him and elicit bigotry without guardedness and gentility from whites.
